Questions 1 to 5 are based on the following document.

I love being a journalist and I try to do my job as I can. But sometimes it's quite difficult too. Last month a new manager was appointed to head up the news team. He seemed very competent and pleasant at first, and he encouraged me in what I was doing. Then he started to bring me small presents – and to phone me at night. I was surprised because I knew that he was married and had kids. Then he asked me to go out with him one night. I was flattered by all the attention, I think, and I accepted. But after that, things got too personal. He started to touch me every time he spoke to me at work. Then he invited me to go away for a weekend. I refused. He asked again a few days later. I refused again and said that I thought it was not appropriate. He got very angry with me. He said that, if I refused, he would make sure that I was fired. He criticised everything I did! Talking about sexual harassment, he is the one who should be fired!

Questions 6 to 10 are about the following document.

Friends and lovers of the same sex

As we grow up, we often make friends with people of the same sex. We feel love and affection for them, and we may express our affection by hugging and kissing each other. When we get older, most people become interested sexually in people of the opposite sex. Some people realise that they are attracted to people of the same sex. In some countries, these people call themselves gay. Loving a person of the same sex is called homosexuality. Loving a person of the opposite sex is called heterosexuality. A woman who is attracted to other women is called lesbian. A man who is attracted to other men is called homosexual.

Homosexuality is strongly disapproved of in many countries, and gay people are often considered outcasts, even by their own families. In some countries, it is also illegal to have sexual relationship with a person of the same sex. This makes it difficult to gay people to express their feelings in public. In many countries, there is more acceptance of gay people today than, say, 50 years ago. But it can be very difficult to be different from all your friends. Society's disapproval also makes it difficult for gay people to receive equal treatment in matters such as marriage. Like any other person, gay people can also get HIV if they have unsafe sex.
